

Don't allow the wireless companies to drag their heels on local number portability. We've already got it for landlines, so they obviously know how to do it. They know that preventing people from taking their numbers with them locks people into their service more than they would be without it. Obviously the wireless companies fear competition without a club to hold over their customers.